

Radio Society of Great Britain

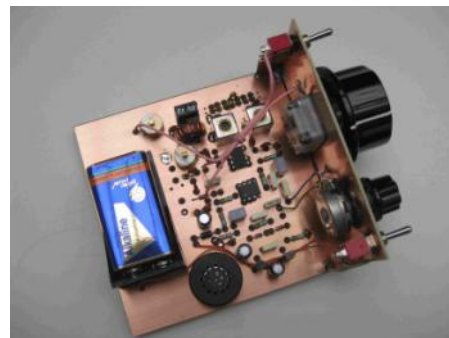

City of Bristol RSGB Group - G6YB

At the Bristol Lawn Tennis & Squash Club, Redland Green, Redland, Bristol BS6 7HF

February 28th 1930hrs Tim Walford G3PCJ

Home brew kits and the latest developments

Tim G3PCJ will be talking about his range of kits and explaining some of the latest designs at the low end of his range, which are aimed at builders just starting on radio construction projects, like the Yeo DC RX and the Radlet CW training TCVR.

Tim has provided all the kits for the very successful Buildathons in Bath and has had years of experience in DIY projects If you like kits this is a “must not miss” evening!

Local News

At the AGM the idea of having a local News Group was suggested ...so in the next few weeks we will set up a Yahoo Group to achieve this . If you haven't used one before they are very simple to operate and will allow us to “broadcast” information, queries, for sales etc etc to our increasingly large group of members. Meeting Update information may be passed round via this group. Initially I will send out Meeting Updates in the usual way, and anyone wanting to continue receiving them will of course be able to do so.

The committee hope it will prove to be a useful service.

Also as agreed at the AGM ,each month there will be a raffle at the meetings organized by Colin G3YHV.

No apologies for this !

LEARN MORSE CODE

No matter your experience, why not attend our morse code training course. Each week we will take you through letters of the alphabet using tried and tested methods, show you on air etiquette, and make the learning experience both fun and informative.

Class of 2010

Training takes the form of 2 hour sessions every Thursday evening starting at 7PM. At the end of the course you can sit the RSGB Morse code proficiency test at a speed that is comfortable for you.

A fun mode, used worldwide
Access to 40% more of the bands
Morse often works when SSB doesn't
Use less power with the same / better results

The next course will start 30th March and run until mid June 2011.
Held at Scout HQ in Grove St, Bath. Starting time 7pm.
